ClearStar.net Releases New Gateway Web Services

CUMMING (ATLANTA), GA – April 10, 2008 – ClearStar.net, a leading provider of software-as-a-service solutions for the employment and tenant screening industry, announced today their largest ever open integration effort: Gateway Web Services.

“Gateway Web Services provides developers unprecedented access to the ClearStar.net platform and expands options for direct integration and the creation of unique applications,” explained Kevin Lenahan, CTO of ClearStar.net.

Entire web sites or components of a web site can now be built using Gateway to address specific business or client needs, without having ClearStar.net being directly involved in the development effort. Using Gateway to build applications allows businesses to leverage the strong security, scalable infrastructure, and business experience that are hallmarks of ClearStar.net.

Gateway is a component of an ongoing commitment to empower ClearStar.net Business Owners to take control of technology strategies. It enables our clients to focus their precious technical resources on innovation and growth through the development of independent technology opportunities.

“We believe opening our platform through the continual development of new web services are key to ClearStar.net delivering robust options and rapidly deployable tools which give our customers the competitive advantage,” continued Lenahan.
